

Fifteen thousand Palestinians live in small remote communities within Area C of the Jordan Valley, which is under full Israeli military and civilian control. Palestinians have not been allowed to develop any infrastructure, so road access is poor. They are not permitted to be connected to the main electrical grid and few are linked to a water network. Israel's zoning and planning policy favours the construction of Israeli settlements in the Jordan Valley and discriminates against Palestinians by not granting building permits to Palestinians in Area C. Most homes are slated for demolition and annually Israeli authorities demolish homes and structures necessary for their livelihood, including those funded by donors such as the EU. Palestinians in Area C are threatened with displacement because of Israel's ongoing ethnic cleansing of historic Palestine. Israel is guilty of violating both international humanitarian law and human rights law, specifically the 4th Geneva Convention.

The community centre will be built in Area B therefore it will not be at imminent risk of demolition and will be a haven for the communities from Area C who can access it.
